La Guardia Makes Inspection Tours Of Water Projects

Manhattan's Mayor and His Party View Lackawack Construction, Inspect Ashokan

Sets Off Blast

La Guardia Discharges Big Dynamite Load on Visit to Croton Falls

Mayor F. H. La Guardia and a party of New York officials today were making an inspection of the Delaware Water project, the 85-mile long aqueduct now under construction, the Lackawack and Neversink project and later made an inspection of the Ashokan reservoir. The mayor and his party was not expected to pass through Kingston on the tour which started Friday with an inspection of the lower reaches of the city's water system.

The party stopped in Newburgh last evening and from there continued their inspection trip today through Ulster county. Friday the party included George J. Gillespie, Henry Hestenberg and Rufus E. McGaghren, members of the board of water supply, Comptroller Joseph D. McGoldrick, Newbold Morris, president of the City Council, Joseph Goodman, commissioner of water supply, gas and electricity, Walter E. Speer, chief engineer of the board of water supply, and also the director of the budget, assistant of the budget and various other officials.

Friday's inspection was of the lower portions of the vast water system with inspection trips being made into Shaft 19 at Elmsford, N. Y., and at Shaft 11 near Croton Falls. In Shaft 11 Mayor La Guardia set off a charge of dynamite in the heading which tore away 180 tons of rock 2,500 feet in the aqueduct.

From Newburgh this morning the party drove to the Gardiner shafts and also the Lackawack shaft where inspections were made.

From Lackawack after inspecting the work there the party visited the Neversink valley and returned to Stone Ridge from where a trip around the Ashokan reservoir was to be made this afternoon. From the Ashokan the party was to return through Stone Ridge to New Paltz and back to New York city.

Seeks Cause of "Stoppage"

The inspection trip was not only for the purpose of inspecting progress on the $210,000,000 tunnel which will be driven 85 miles through solid rock from Hill View reservoir to the Rondout Reservoir on the upper Rondout creek, but it was also an expedition by the mayor to ascertain what had suddenly stopped the water supply to the great metropolitan area.

Assuming that the water supply had been cut off and that all lines of communication had been broken, Mayor La Guardia started out on his tour of inspection to "open up the stoppage" and at the same time re-establish the "broken communications line."

The mythical "stoppage" seemed not to bother the consumers of water in New York city nor was the loss of communications of much concern to the residents but the "game" was played with all the zeal of a reality.

Mayor La Guardia's car was equipped with a radio communication line which kept him constantly in touch with police headquarters in New York city. Along the route of the tour cars were stopped at various points to relay messages as the mayor's car passed out of the range of its contact with New York. A police launch was stationed at Ossining to relay messages to station WRGR and cars dropped out of line at various points up state to relay messages. The inspection was one not only for examination of the water supply but to try out the communications line.

"First Day Sales"

Washington, Oct. 28 (AP)—The post office department has selected several New York state postoffices for "first day sales" of the forthcoming series of postage stamps depicting famous Americans. Stamps honoring Frederick Remington will go on sale at Canton, N. Y.; James Fenimore Cooper at Cooperstown, N. Y.; Victor Herbert, Edward MacDowall, Samuel F. B. Morse and Augustus Saint-Gaudens at New York city, and Washington Irving at Tarrytown, N. Y. Dates of first sales and details of the stamps will be announced soon.

Treasury Receipts

Washington, Oct. 28 (AP)—The position of the treasury October 26: Receipts, $7,741,310.91; expenditures, $21,231,980.04; net balance, $1,920,971,405.48; working balance included $1,221,251,330.35; customs receipts for month, $27,104,718.20; receipts for fiscal year (July 1), $1,710,967,114.58; expenditures, $3,103,730,132.61; excess of expenditures, $1,392,763,018.03; gross debt, $4,023,639,787.23; increase over previous day, $232,652.62; gold assets, $1,704,547,465.08.

Rates Speak Louder Than All Promises

Under Mayor Heiselman, the city's tax rates are the lowest in ten years.

It required good, sound business management and constant attention to business to keep taxes low when enormous sums were required for various kinds of welfare and relief, almost unheard of ten years ago.

Home relief, work relief, old age relief, hospital and medical care, blind relief, care of dependent children, are some of the social services which Kingston has provided, with the cooperation of the State and Federal governments.

Hundreds of men have been engaged on projects which have created many public improvements for the benefit of the people of Kingston. Mayor Heiselman because he has provided plans and projects, and because he has furnished the city's share of the cost, has been able to provide employment for more persons than any other city of our size in the State.

Municipal services have been expanded and improved during the Heiselman administration. The city's streets were never as good as they are now. The new street lighting systems which have been provided are the pride of the city. Improvements have been made in every department of the city, which have added to the safety, health and welfare of all.

With all bills paid, Mayor Heiselman's administration has finished five years with a surplus, while many other governmental agencies went deep into the red.

You would naturally expect, with the cost of welfare and relief, and the cost of the many public improvements, that the tax rates would have been high. On the contrary, during the Heiselman administration they have been lower.

Study these tax rates for the past ten years:

1939.....	$38.96	Heiselman's budget
1938.....	38.92	Heiselman's budget
1937.....	37.96	Heiselman's budget
1936.....	35.48	Heiselman's budget
1935.....	37.38	Heiselman's budget
1934.....	41.28	Walker's budget
1933.....	38.60	Carey's budget
1932.....	56.16	Carey's budget
1931.....	40.00	Dempsey's budget
1930.....	41.24	Dempsey's budget

It is interesting to note that assessments were raised over $1,200,000 during Carey's administration and that, if this had not been done, the tax rate for 1933 would have been $40.62.

These low tax rates of the Heiselman administration were brought about by sound, business-like and humane policies. They were brought about by hard work and strict attention to the affairs of the city. Mayor Heiselman has no other business. He devotes, and will continue to devote, his entire time, attention and energy to the business of the city of Kingston.

Through the six perilous years of the Heiselman administration, the credit structure of the city has been kept safe and sound. The financial affairs of the city have been scientifically managed by Mayor Heiselman, who is recognized as an expert in municipal finance. The best proof of this is the recent bond sale. Bonds of the city were sold at an annual interest rate of less than one per cent (1%), one of the lowest rates in the history of the cities of New York State.

These facts are part of the record.

These facts speak louder than words or promises.

Do you approve of the tax rates of the Heiselman administration?

Do you wish to have this high type of city management continued?

If so, you will have an opportunity to say "Yes" on Election Day.

Auctioneer's Hammer to Beat Out Last Requiem for Once-Noted Chichester

44 Little Homes of 276 Villagers to Be Sold at 3 P. M.; May Become Resort

The 44 little homes in the old Catskill Mountain hamlet of Chichester go on the auction block today.

The 276 villagers, who like their fathers and grandfathers were entirely dependent for their livelihood on the now bankrupt Schwaartzwelder furniture factory, hope they will not be forced to move.

They waged a battle of propaganda preparatory to the auction, turning to columns of Ulster county papers to inform outsiders who may seek to buy their homes that the dwellings are dilapidated and that the water supply might be better.

The furniture company in nearby Shandaken went bankrupt last year. It owned all of the homes, built when the company established the village in 1863.

Most of the plant closed, most of the villagers—a majority are master cabinet makers—have received home relief or have been given short-time employment by the county. Fourteen of the original families have moved away.

Advertisements of the auction would be developed as a retreat for New Yorkers wishing to build country homes there. The mill and hamlet were built by Henry Chichester, a New York City, who imported skilled cabinet makers and built homes for them. Most of the original families have remained.

Two Nazis Killed Near Edinburgh

Aviators Are Forced Down in Dramatic Battle by Anglo Planes

London, Oct. 28 (AP)—Two German airmen were killed, one wounded and a Nazi pilot captured today in an aerial drama of the skies witnessed by hundreds of Scots near Edinburgh when British fighter planes engaged and forced down a German warplane.

The air ministry announced that "a German aircraft which was attempting reconnaissance was forced down by our fighters this morning east of Dalkeith (about six and one-half miles southeast of Edinburgh)."

The invaded apparently was headed for the strategic Firth of Forth, objective of previous German raids.

Immediately after the Nazi plane was sighted, British ships went aloft with a resulting rare display of aerobatics as the German pilot tried desperately to shake off his attackers.

"Finally the German plane came on a hillside and struck a stone wall and even then the pilot would not give up," one witness said. "He tried to get his machine in the air again and ran along the rough ground for about a half mile before he was shot."

Administration Leaders Say Congress Will Pass Embargo Repeal, Quit Soon; France Hails Senate Act With Delight

Glaring Headlines Tell Parisians of Senate's Vote; France Hopes for Warplanes

British Surprised

Anglo Sources Now Await House Decision Before Commenting

(By the Associated Press)
France welcomed with undisguised joy today the United States Senate's vote to repeal the arms embargo, while Britain indicated it was "not dissatisfied" and Germany—where the news was withheld from the public—maintained silence.

Paris was informed by glaring headlines in the morning newspapers.

Stirred by the possibility of obtaining more American-made warplanes—which apparently have proved their dependability on the western front—the French cautiously considered the Senate vote prophetic of an administration victory in the House.

One newspaper referred to the development as "a victory for President Roosevelt, who is supported by the majority of the American public."

In Britain, the Senate vote caused some surprise in official quarters, which apparently had expected a stiffer fight. They suggested that any comment before the issue has been decided in the House would be premature.

Diplomatic circles said unofficially, however, that Britain "at least would not be dissatisfied with the Senate's decision."

The British press was more outspoken, seeing reason for encouragement. The Daily Mail commented:

"It cannot now be concealed that the prospect of such a vast war storehouse as America offers comes as a tonic encouragement to the nations fighting for the cause of democracy."

The Daily Sketch remarked that "the news from Washington will make poor reading for Hitler, but it may hurry him into doing something on the western front." Headlines in the Herald said "Good news! Britain will get arms from U. S. A."

While official comment was lacking in Berlin, the news apparently was not entirely unexpected there. A foreign office spokesman said no statement could be issued until after careful study.

Berlin's morning newspapers made no reference to the matter.

John T. Adams, 77, Dies in Dubuque

Former Chairman of GOP National Committee From 1921-24

JOHN T. ADAMS

Dubuque, Ia., Oct. 28 (AP)—John Taylor Adams, 77, chairman of the Republican national committee from 1921 to 1924, died here this morning.

John Taylor Adams, for 12 years Iowa member of the Republican national committee and, from 1921 to 1924 chairman of that body, was rated as one of the leading political strategists of his day.

Never seeking or holding an elective office, he used his flair for organization to make his impression upon party history, mapping and managing campaigns, steering candidates and the party away from recoil issues and, in general, applying to politics the methods which enabled him to rise in business from office boy to the presidency of a big manufacturing concern.

He inherited his liking for politics. He was a direct descendant of the John Adams who came to the United States.

Accident in Which James A. Rapp Escaped Injury

Friday at noon trucks of the Great Bull Markets of this city and John H. Boyle of Accord collided at the intersection of Main street and Washington avenue. The Bull Market truck, driven by James A. Rapp, turned over three times. The photograph shows the Bull Market truck after the collision as it lay on its side at the street intersection. Rapp, the operator, escaped with but slight injuries. The light pickup truck also involved in the crash may be seen in the middle distance, upright.

City Counsel Says Board Can't Fix Janitor Age Limit

Cashin Says at Times State and Local Civil Service Groups May Establish Ruling on Ages

Corporation Counsel John M. Cashin has submitted to the Board of Education his opinion regarding the right of the board to fix an age limit for janitors for the city schools. He holds that the board has no right to fix an age limit and that in "some instances" the State and Municipal Civil Service Board has a right to make such restrictions.

The opinion of Corporation Counsel Cashin came as a reply to the board's request for a legal opinion as to whether there was any way in which an age limit could be fixed. Board members felt that in order to place younger men on the janitor jobs in future a maximum age limit for appointment to the position should be fixed. A request was made to the local Civil Service Board for a list of eligible men "under fifty." However the list now available contains the names of the men with highest ratings without regard to age.

Cites Law

In his opinion Mr. Cashin cited Section 25-a of the Civil Service Law which provides that there can be an age limit established by the State and Municipal Civil Service Board for positions which require special physical requirements such as firemen, policemen, prison guards, etc. He held, however, that the Board of Education itself had no right to set an age limit.

As a result the Board of Education will set forth before the Municipal Civil Service Board the requirements for a janitor and ask that board to fix an age limit if the board feels it can do so under the provisions of the Civil Service Law.

Members of the Board of Education feel that because of the long hours, amount of overtime work and the heavy work in winter when sidewalks must be cleared of snow before students begin to arrive at school and the other hard tasks in schools where hand-fired boilers must be cared for and buildings heated by opening of the schools, that the job does present a task which requires younger men and men of special physical qualifications.

Receives First Cross

Paris, Oct. 28 (AP)—Ritter Philippe, 17-year-old Alsace farm boy, is the first civilian to receive the croix de guerre in this war. French dispatches said the boy was working in a field when a German pilot landed his warplane nearby, strode to Ritter, with drawn revolver and demanded, "Where am I?" "In France," Ritter blurted. Ignoring the revolver, he fled to his bicycle and pedaled away to notify a French patrol, which arrested the pilot before he could set fire to the plane.

More Announces His 24th Child's Birth

Berlin, N. H., Oct. 28 (AP)—Arthur P. Morel, a building contractor, announced today the birth of his 24th child. The newest arrival, Morris Aime, weighs 12 pounds, and was the largest of the children, of whom 20 are living. Morel's first wife died in 1924. Thirteen years ago he married Germaine Turmel, mother of his second dozen.

One of 21 children himself, Morel served in France for three years with the Canadian army, although an American.

Cluett to Request Two-Sided Inquest Of Smith Shooting

Rep. E. Harold Cluett (R., N. Y.) told Troy Legionnaires today he would ask Congress and the U. S. Veterans' Administration Bureau to investigate alleged mismanagement in handling of veterans' pension claims, the Associated Press reports.

Cluett asked Troy Legion post officials for affidavits from persons who have dealt with the New York city office of the veterans' bureau where Jesse J. Smith, 46, Troy World War veteran, was shot and killed a week ago today by a policeman when Smith brandished a revolver while asking for settlement of a pension claim.

Troy veterans' groups at a mass meeting last night adopted a resolution demanding future veterans' cases be handled by veterans rather than civilian employees. The Third District, New York State American Legion, at a meeting in Kingston, adopted a resolution Sunday asking a "thorough and constructive investigation" of the veterans' bureau in New York.

Students to Get Time for Courses By Denominations

Board of Education Gives Power to Laidlaw to Grant Time; Other Matters Studied

School Superintendent Arthur J. Laidlaw was empowered by vote of the board of education last night to grant permission to local pastor for religious courses in compliance with a recently adopted amendment to the state education laws.

Action of the board came after the reading of a communication from the Rev. John B. McCaffrey, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, who asked that Catholic pupils of local public schools in the uptown section of the city be excused from school for an hour each week to attend religious school.

State Permits Study

The new state law permits pupils in public schools to attend religious schools conducted by denominations who provide for such schools and one period a week in any convenient place designated. First application made locally was presented by the Rev. Russell Damstra, of the Church of the Comforter, and that by Father McCaffrey followed. The request was granted on motion of Trustee Haver and in view of the possibility of other denominations seeking similar authority, the board voted to have permission given by the superintendent without the necessity of placing such further requests before the board.

The Rev. J. B. Simmons, spiritual director of the St. Joseph's Holy Name Society of this city, sent a communication to the board of education expressing the thanks of the society to the Kingston High School Band for its participation in the parade recently when the Holy Name Society from this locality held a rally at the municipal stadium.

Father Simmons expressed his

Prompt House Passage Is Forecast by Safe Margin of Thirty Votes Within Week

No Preamble

Bitter Fight Breaks Out Over Manner of Terms in Preamble

Washington, Oct. 28 (AP)—Administration leaders predicted today that Congress would clear the way for arms sales to Europe's warring nations and go home by next week-end.

They forecast prompt House passage of the neutrality revision bill, which the Senate approved by a vote of 63 to 30 last night after 21 days of debate.

One member of the House leadership said a careful count of noses indicated that repeal of the arms embargo—by provision which many legislators on both sides of the controversy agreed would benefit Great Britain and France—would be approved by a majority of at least 30 votes.

The House was expected to take up the bill early next week and send it to a joint Senate-House conference committee. The House approved a modified embargo in the regular congressional session earlier this year, and its bill thus must be adjusted with the Senate measure before legislation can be enacted finally.

Congressional insiders generally agreed that an administration-inclined conference committee would work quickly and write a compromise measure embodying virtually all of the Senate bill. The committee's action would then have to be ratified by both branches of the Legislature.

Restrictions Given

Besides carrying out President Roosevelt's recommendation that the arms embargo be eliminated, the Senate measure would impose restrictions on American credits, shipping and travel to belligerent countries.

The final Senate vote, taken before galleries packed to the walls, was followed by an unexpected and bitter outbreak over the usually insignificant point of how the preamble should read.

The bill was referred to the Senate without a preamble. Senator Connally (D., Texas), a supporter of the legislation, waited until after the measure was passed and then proposed one stating that this country desired to preserve its neutrality and that in imposing restrictions on its shipping and its citizens it was surrendering none of its rights under international law.

Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.), an opponent of embargo repeal, rose from his seat and began thumping papers on his desk. "Mr. President," he declared finally, "I can not agree to a preamble which is a stump political speech in behalf of this bill."

The bill should stand or fall on its own merits. If you don't want to inject politics into this issue why should it be necessary to inject—at the last minute—a political speech?"

Connally's Reply

Connally pulled his spectacles far down his nose, raised his arms above him and replied: "The senator from Montana says this is a stump speech. He ought to know—he's just made one."

The galleries tittered. The debate had been alternately bitter, sarcastic and amusing. The last hours before passage of the bill, but Senator Minton (D., Ind.), presiding, found it almost impossible to keep order when the Wheeler-Connally dispute flared.

Often a half dozen senators were on their feet at once, and Minton was banging his gavel almost constantly. Wheeler and Senator Clark (D., Mo.) threatened to talk indefinitely to prevent approval of the preamble. Connally withdrew it finally but pointed out that the joint Senate-House conference committee could write any sort of a preamble it chose.

Both Majority Leader Barkley (D., Ind.) and Minority Leader McNary (R., Ore.) predicted adjournment of the special session by next week-end. Barkley served notice that the leadership would demand adjournment even though there has been some sentiment for keeping Congress in session for the duration of the European war.

As passed by the Senate, the bill would require that title to most cargoes destined for belligerent nations be transferred to non-Americans before they left these shores.

American ships could not carry arms to belligerents anywhere and could not carry any goods to France, England, Germany and—in the main—to the east coast of Canada. However, they could carry ordinary commercial cargoes

Man Who Gave Farewell Party on Eve Of 'Death' Anticipates Victory Dinner

New York, Oct. 28 (AP)—One might say Claude J. Bradley is laughing at death.

He just won't go down—and the date for death, set by his doctors, is a full month past.

Doctors told Bradley last June he had only two or three months to live, then he would die of cancer of the spine.

His friends threw a gay farewell party for him last July. Glasses were clinked, songs sung, tall tales told. Bradley jested and pounded happy tunes from a piano. He was the very life of his jolly wake.

But Bradley mentally put a ring around a date in the September calendar. It was a month ago yesterday that he saw the circled day come and go. Today he still was sitting cheerfully in his wheelchair, happily conducting his cement business over his telephone.

It was embarrassing to ask this cheery man if he thought he was going to die. So the question was put this way:

"Are you going to have another party?"

"Surely," he said. "But it's not going to be a wake this time. It's going to be a victory dinner. I'll throw it as soon as I know I have whipped this thing."

Some months ago he said, "Maybe, just maybe, the doctors are wrong."

Today he said, "I've licked death for a month, and I'll be sitting here after a lot of my friends who said bon voyage to me last July are gone."

Bradley is a husky 53-year-old with reddish hair, lots of freckles, and heaps of hope in his eyes.

SHOKAN

Shokan, Oct. 27.—Cards have been received from Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Giaccone announcing the couple's safe arrival at North Daytona, Fla.

Miss Virginia Cudney of Kingston is spending a vacation at the home of her sister, Mrs. Fred Adsit.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Kirm of New York are guests at the Longyear House on the old state road. Three local residents, who took a Sunday afternoon stroll down to the site of old Shokan village, report that the famous Wilbur Hill spring is functioning, though not with its one time vigor. The spring was identified by a seepage of water high up in the clay bank across the Butternutkill from the Hill foundations.

Harrison Fries of Long Island was at his mountain road place over the week-end. Kingston hunters here recently included Edward Davis and his son-in-law, Arthur Davis. "Ed," who has been with the F. B. Matthews company for more than 30 years, knows the Tice Ten Eyck foothills like a book.

Lewis Bodie, a former resident of Ashokan, was in the reservoir country last Sunday.

Kingston hunters here Sunday reported that they heard a number of partridges but were unable to get a shot at the birds.

Still intact, for the most part, are the rows of old sugar maples at the site of the John Windrum and Millard Eckert places. The large spruce trees in the Martin and Eckert yards also are flourishing as are the immense maples at the John DuBois place. Brush and saplings rapidly are crowding the abandoned state road, leaving much more than a foot path at some points.

S. Kute, a vacation guest at the Grossman farm house for many years, is again making a stay at this west end boarding house.

Saturday, October 28, 1871. Benjamin Bell and Mary C. Rockwell, both of Olive, were married by Judge Dewitt C. Davis at the Davis residence in Shokan.

Robert B. Peck, Jr., returned to New York Wednesday following a sojourn at the Peck place on the mountain. R. B. Peck, Sr., a member of the Herald Tribune editorial staff, spent Tuesday with his son here.

Jerry Polinsky of Stone Ridge is repairing Mrs. Bertha Mackey's house in the village.

A number of sun fences have been put up along Route 28 in this section.

Local Red Cross workers report gratifying results in their early canvass for memberships and subscriptions.

The reported pickup in business is reflected in an increased number of trucks passing through Shokan. The heavy trucking on Route 28 appears to increase each year. Huge loads of scrap iron, lumber and coal are noted going towards Kingston these days, together with the usual movement of milk in tank trucks. Headed for the mountains are scores of big gasoline and oil trucks.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Gearon motored up from Brooklyn and spent Wednesday at their place adjoining the Reformed Church grounds.

Many trees still retain their foliage despite the heavy frosts of this week. The colorful scenery of the mountains and reservoir preserve probably will last through the coming week-end.

Angora Goat Industry
It is a fact that Angora goats to automobiles, yet this species of goat provides the raw material for the mohair upholstery found in so many motor cars. One goat must thrive and produce for 10 years to provide enough mohair to upholster the average five-passenger sedan. Consequently, because of the demand of car manufacturers for mohair fabric, the raising of Angora goats has become a major industry, especially in Texas, where production in 1937 14,000,000 of the 16,558,000 pounds produced in the seven leading producing states.

America early in the 17th century and whose descendants included John and John Quincy Adams, the second and sixth presidents of the United States. The town's father, Shubael P. Adams, was born in Massachusetts, practiced law for 20 years at Lowell and represented that district in the Massachusetts legislature before moving to Dubuque, Ia., in 1857. His mother's family dated back eight generations to John Livermore, first settler of New Haven, Conn.

Born in Dubuque

John Taylor Adams was born in Dubuque December 22, 1862. He went through the public schools and, upon being graduated from high school in 1881, entered business.

His first job was as office boy at $3 a week with a cash and door factory. Eventually he became president of the concern and guided it to top ranking in its field.

Adams took a minor part in Dubuque county politics until 1908. Then his fellow-townsmen, U. S. Senator William B. Allison, who had started a notable career by defeating Adams' father for Congress in 1862, drafted him to manage what proved to be the latter's last campaign. The opponent for the nomination was Albert Cummins, then governor of Iowa and later Allison's successor in the Senate.

A desire to "dress up" the campaign by removing the semblance of "professional politics" and give it a business-like tone, motivated Allison's selection of Adams as manager. The business man's unsuspected talent as a political strategist made the effort a huge success and brought him to the attention of the national leaders of the party.

In 1912 President Taft asked Adams to direct his primary campaign in Iowa. The Dubuque man won the state's delegation to the Republican national convention for Taft against both Theodore Roosevelt and Cummins, who sought support as a "favorite son." That was the year of the "Bull Moose" split in the party and out of it Adams emerged as Iowa member of the national committee.

Six years later, after the breach ostensibly had been healed, there was an echo of it in Adams' case. He had strong backing for the chairmanship of the committee, but "T. R." joined in a fight against him and it was not until 1921 that he attained that place. Meanwhile, in the 1920 campaign, he had been in charge of western Republican headquarters at Chicago.

When finally chosen to head the committee, on June 7, 1921, Adams was elected despite the fact that President Harding was known to favor an Ohio man for the post. This circumstance, plus a stand which Adams took against Harding's proposal to have the United States adhere to the World Court, led to many reports of a quarrel between the chairman and the titular head of the party, but Adams' friends always said their relations were friendly.

Much more cordiality developed between Adams and President Coolidge. The former was almost as reticent as "Silent Cal" and there seemed to be a close bond of understanding between them. Mr. and Mrs. Adams, their son and two daughters frequently were guests at the White House in the Coolidge regime.

Mrs. Adams, before her marriage on May 19, 1902, was Miss Winifred Rose of Dubuque.

Students to Get Time for Courses

Thanks for the fine performance of the band and said that it was perhaps the most colorful in the entire line of march and one of the best musical organizations in line. As an appreciation a donation of $25 was made to the band. The senior class was authorized to use the Myron J. Michael School gym for the senior prom November 22, from 9 o'clock until 12.

A communication was received from the Federated Council, P. T. A., thanking the board for use of the high school auditorium on September 21.

A request from the P. T. A. of No. 6, for use of the high school auditorium for a piano recital by Stanley Hummel on December 6, was granted.

Permission was granted the Volunteers of America for use of the high school auditorium for November 5 when they will launch their campaign. Col. Charles B. Booth will be the speaker.

Medical Service

A request was received by the board Friday evening from Father McCaffrey of St. Joseph's Church asking that the city school medical service and health service be extended to the pupils of St. Joseph's parochial school as provided by a recent amendment. The board voted to give that service so far as present facilities would allow.

The payroll amounting to $41,491.27 was audited as were vouchers in the sum of $11,078.33. The board voted to pay Bingle and Son, Cohen & Kramer and Johnson Heating Company for work done on the vocational school, as soon as the architect certifies the work is satisfactory. These are the final payments to those contractors.

Trustee Hutton reported that insurance committee had investigated coverage on the vocational school and found that insurance on the building was about adequate but that there should be some additional coverage on the contents. This will be placed as soon as a survey is completed.

Insurance on the M. J. M. School and for sprinkler damage to the high school has been covered.

Trustee Rowland for the athletic committee asked that the Myron J. Michael gym and locker rooms be made available one night a week for the department of recreation of the city for basketball games.

Legionnaires Observe Past Commanders Night

betball games. He explained that the move for this form of recreation was expanding and there was not room to accommodate the players in present quarters. A rule that a player may play on only one team has been adopted to provide wider benefits from the recreation movement.

Mr. Rowland also reported that there had been taken out a protective policy which will supply medical attention to any high school student participating in athletics who may be injured while playing in any athletic contest. This covers the football team, basketball team, track, baseball, in fact all sports held under school authority except rifle team. The charge for the football team is $2 per man and for the other sports the cost is less per man.

Banking Report

Superintendent Laidlaw reported that there was now on deposit in the school savings system $105,950.69 and that there are 10,222 accounts. Since the last report had been made the savings in the school banking system had increased by $5,387.64. Mr. Laidlaw also reported all fire extinguishers had been serviced. He also reported that window shades in many schools were not of the best type to admit proper light. When drawn they exclude so much light that artificial light is required. He reported that in all probabilities one room at No. 8 could be filled up with shades of a scientific quality at no cost to the board as a demonstration of how proper curtains could exclude the glare but permit proper light to enter a room indirectly. If this demonstration is made available he invited the board members to witness the demonstration.

The matter of holding late afternoon meetings instead of evening meetings was discussed but no action taken pending an investigation as to how the matter would affect some members of the board who are out of town considerably during the day.

The board adjourned to meet November 17.

OutdoorGOP Rally Slated for Monday; Public Is Invited

There will be a big outdoor Republican rally at the corner of Furnace and Franklin streets on Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock. The speakers will include Mayor C. J. Heiselman, Alderman-at-large John J. Schwenk and other Republican candidates.

All who are interested in good government are invited to attend this open air meeting to hear campaign issues discussed by the candidates.

James P. McCaffrey, Wampsville railroad gateman, thought he was being bombed when a window of his shanty caved in with a bang. But the cause was a mail bag, tossed from a fast train. It shattered glass and nearly hit McCaffrey.

Halloween to Be Big Event Here

Witches, goblins, ghosts and other Halloween spirits will be on hand at the municipal auditorium on Tuesday evening when the city recreation department, together with Kingston Post of the American Legion, will stage the third annual community Halloween party for the children of Kingston.

All of the evening's fun planned for the children of the city will not be confined within the auditorium walls for two huge parades of children in costume are planned, one from each end of the city, which will provide plenty of fun and excitement for both young and old.

The parades will be headed by the American Legion Corps and another band, not yet announced. The city recreation department is arranging a special program of activity at the auditorium following the parades, which will include many different types of special Halloween entertainment features. The entire program will be closed with a showing of talking pictures.

Announcements of the Tuesday evening celebration are being forwarded to the local schools so that every child in the city will know about the big event. Parents will be encouraged to attend the performance with their children and to take part in the general festivities.

Realtor Tells How Cannery Concern 'Spotted' Brewery

An interesting story was told today by A. L. Haas, who on November 1, will assume the position of local branch manager of the George B. Ray Farm & Real Estate Agency on Broadway, as to how the canned food products concern became interested in Kingston and the Hauck brewery plant at Wurts and McEntee streets.

Several days ago Mr. Goldstein, president of the new concern, dropped into the Ray office on Broadway and said he was interested in finding a factory plant with at least 10,000 square feet of floor space that could be used for his concern.

Mr. Haas and Mr. Ray immediately thought of the former Hauck brewery and Mr. Goldstein with Messrs. Ray and Haas inspected the plant and were satisfied that it would meet the requirements for which it was proposed to use the building.

Mr. Goldstein said the concern canned chicken, also dog food and other products, and would employ about 50 men. As it was planned to kill and dress the chickens on the premises a permit for that purpose was necessary from the health department.

Later they held a conference with Dr. L. E. Sanford, health officer, and other officials of the health department in regard to the required permit, and it was decided to take the matter up with the health board at the November meeting.

Mr. Goldstein said Mr. Haas today, is expected to be in Kingston over the week-end with the concern's engineer to look over the Hauck plant.

Mr. Goldstein informed Messrs. Ray and Haas that he believed that it would be possible to use most of the machinery in the Hauck plant, and it was likely that the entire building would be used by the concern if the necessary health permit was obtained.

Bible Group to Meet

There will be a meeting of members of the Ulster County Bible Society Thursday, November 2, at 2:30 p. m., in the chapel of the First Reformed Church of this city. The meeting is called to effect a re-organization of this historic society. All friends of this cause are invited to present.

The Rev. John Edward Price frankly showed his pessimism over prospects of a Democrat's chance for office in the Sidney Republican stronghold. My 10 years in Sidney center have taught me many things, including the fact that a Democrat running for office in this delightful community has about as much chance of reaching his goal as a snowball cat being chased by an asbestos dog through Hades, he said.

Night School Has 267 Registrations And 15 Subjects

George E. Kenny, principal of the Kingston Night School which opened for classes on October 16, says a total of 267 students registered with 15 subjects being taught.

In his first report to Superintendent Arthur J. Laidlaw, Mr. Kenny reports as follows:

The Kingston Night School opened for registration and classes on Monday evening, October 16. New students have entered every night that school has been in session, and three classes, cooking, retail selling, and Spanish have been organized since opening night to meet the increased demands. The new vocational courses in trade electricity, automobile mechanics and needle trades have proved especially popular. It has been necessary to divide the auto mechanics and needle trades classes into two groups, each group attending three nights in two weeks.

Following is a record of the registration to date:

The subject, teacher and number enrolled follows:

Americanization, Mr. Van Valkenburgh—23.

Retail selling, Mr. Wilkes—19.

Bookkeeping, (two classes), Mr. Woodard—17 and 25.

Shorthand 1, Mr. Connick—25.

Typing, Mr. Connick—28.

Typing, Mr. Walz—24.

jects—89.

Shorthand 11, Mrs. Walz—16.

Machine shop and mechanical drawing, Mr. Hoderath—18, (five on reserve).

Woodworking—Mr. Mack—20.

Trade electricity, Mr. Craft—18, (two on reserve).

Auto mechanics, Mr. Partlan—28, (seven on reserve).

Needle trades, Miss Evelyn Smith—32.

Sewing, Miss Clarissa Smith—23.

Cooking, Miss Schuetz—25.

Spanish, Mrs. Decker—15.

Total registration by subjects—356.

Students registered in two sub-

Total individual students registered—267.

We shall be glad to have the superintendent and the members of the Board of Education visit the school and inspect our work.

Respectfully submitted,

GEORGE E. KENNY,

Principal

HALLOWEEN PRANKS

Halloween pranks in the good old days were not always mild or harmless, but lately in some sections of the country they have been getting considerably out of hand. Instead of trying to suppress the young exuberant celebrators, however, wise civic leaders have taken to planning such good times for Halloween that the children, small and large, are willing to enjoy themselves without getting into serious mischief.

Parades, bonfires, community costume parties, tempting feasts, Punch and Judy shows and stunts are among the counter attractions offered. The old Halloween traditions and games are given a place in the new setting and a spirit of general hilarity makes it possible for old and young to co-operate with genuine success.

It takes planning and hard work on the part of leaders in a community, but they reap their reward in the reduced amount of damaged property, the community good will created and the gratitude of the police force.

In Kingston Halloween will be observed appropriately by the children with a parade and party under the auspices of Kingston Post of the American Legion and the city's recreation department. The Legion's part in the festivities will be in arranging the parade through the streets to the Municipal Auditorium; where the party will be staged under the direction of the city's recreation department.

Demonstration here in recent years of what could be accomplished on Halloween by refraining from destructive practices and disorderly acts was much appreciated by local residents. It has proven what cooperation on the part of parents and young people can do towards making the day pass in a more agreeable manner.

The police department again requests parents to advise against and inform the young people to refrain from destroying property. Marking business places, soaping windows of homes and stores and automobiles are violations of the law.

SECOND THOUGHT ON THE WAR

The change in war sentiment in this country since September 1 indicates that American citizens have recovered from the first shock of the European conflict. On the whole, they are as sympathetic with the French and British as they were at the start. They have simply come to feel that sending an army to join in the fracas would be senseless folly.

In the first week of the war, according to the Gallup polls, 40 per cent of those questioned thought this country should declare war on Germany and send the army and navy on Germany and send the army and navy into the scrap. By now only 29 per cent favor such action, while 71 per cent oppose going to war.

For a number of years Americans had been reading books and hearing lectures upholding the theory that this country could not stay out of a big war, no matter what our peaceful inclinations. So when a big war got under way, it was widely accepted that it would be only a matter of time before we got in.

Today more of us, apparently, believe we can stay out and should stay out and will help civilization more by staying out. At any rate, we no longer expect to be dragged in against our will. We now agree that such important matters can be decided by us, rather than by blind fate or scheming foreigners.

PEAK POWER

There are many kinds of power in the world and in the news. Political power and artistic power, military power and emotional power, water power and will power, horse power and the power of a perfect life. But all of these give place to the electrical power that flows along our wires, to the sturdy and untiring little kilowatts that do so many of the nation's chores.

The production and consumption of electrical power seems now to be at its peak for all time in this country. Expansion of plant is the order of the day. A certain amount of development of the use of electricity was expected whenever business began to move up and wherever rural districts got a chance to use it, but the sudden rise in demand has been overwhelming.

War boom? Business boom? Somewhat of both. But most of the increase seems wholesome, coming because of sound business growth. The household demands are growing rapidly, and while each home equipped with a new appliance uses only a little more power, the aggregate is calling for new plants and new generators.

This increase in the use of natural resources for the comfort and well-being of people is wholly good. Not so good when used to make the tools of war. So far the peace-time uses are in the ascendancy.

Children are the great logicians; they can explain anything with the magic formula, "just because," instead of confusing it with 10,000 words.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)
ARE COLD VACCINES HELPFUL?

You are suffering with a "cold" when you meet a friend or acquaintance who, instead of recommending some home remedy, suggests that you see Dr. Blank and get some injections—"cold" injections. He tells you that before he took these cold injections he suffered with a dozen colds every year and now he did not have more than one cold each year. You are about to take his advice when you meet another friend who has taken these injections given by this same Dr. Blank and he certainly has as many colds as before taking the injections.

What about these injections to prevent colds? There isn't any question but that they help many sufferers but the results obtained by physicians have been so varied—some 10 per cent cures and others 60 per cent—that no fair or satisfactory figures have been obtainable. It is interesting to read of the results obtained by Drs. J. J. and M. J. Hauser, Detroit, as reported in Archives of Otolaryngology, Chicago.

Drs. Hauser gave cold vaccines by injection under the skin to the first ten persons, into the skin to the next ten, and placebos—plain sterile water—to the following ten. This arrangement was repeated until there were 100 persons in each group. After this number was reached, the vaccine was given by injection under the skin to the next hundred who came to the clinic. The first injections were given during the third week in October and the last ones by the middle of December. During the last two weeks in May each one that had taken the full number of injections was questioned. Information was obtained from 188 of the 200 that had received cold injections under the skin, from 95 of the 100 who had received cold injections into the skin, and from 88 of the 100 who had received the injection of sterile water.

Of those who had received the cold injections under the skin, 74 per cent said they had fewer colds, 6 per cent had no colds at all, 18 per cent had the same number, and 2 per cent had more colds. Of those who had received cold injections into the skin, 52 per cent had fewer colds, 11 per cent had no colds at all, 33 per cent had the same number as before, and 3 per cent had more colds.

What about those who had received sterile water injections? About 60 per cent had fewer colds, 6 per cent had no colds at all, 31 per cent had the same number, and 2 per cent had more colds.

From these figures it would appear that subcutaneous—under the skin—injections of "cold" vaccines are worth trying by those who suffer with frequent colds.

The Common Cold

The common cold is an ailment which is frequently neglected but it may prove very dangerous and may be followed by serious damage to the system. Send for Dr. Barton's booklet "The Common Cold" (No. 104). Send your request to The Bell Laboratory, 247 West 43rd Street, New York, N. Y., enclosing ten cents to cover cost of handling and mention the name of the Kingston Daily Freeman.

The sophomores have selected Warren Overbagh, president; William Van Voorhis, vice president; Vincent Kenney, secretary; John Flanagan, treasurer; Nelson Watson, class advisor.

John Rivenberg of Partition street has been appointed as substitute carrier at the local post office to succeed Clinton Lasher, who resigned to accept a position in Washington, D. C.

Republican Candidates

FRANK GILL

The selection of Frank Gill as the Republican candidate for supervisor of the Sixth ward has proven to be a popular one. While Mr. Gill has not aspired to public office before, he has acquired a background of experience that has particularly well equipped him to represent his ward in the county legislative body. He was born and has always resided in the Sixth ward and was educated in the immaculate Conception grade and Kingston schools.

For the past 12 years Mr. Gill has been connected with the construction industry and has held a responsible position with Harp & Conway. His contact with the public and knowledge of public affairs has given him a good working knowledge of public affairs.

Among the Ulster county jobs on which he was actively engaged are, the West Park grade crossing elimination, the Kingston Boulevard, the New Paltz-Ireland Corners highway, the Kingston-Ellenville and the Shandaken-Lexington highways.

Mr. Gill has earned the respect and esteem of the people of the Sixth Ward and is so well and favorably known throughout the county that he is popularly and affectionately known as "Gillie."

His interest in civic affairs has been the less keen because he has viewed them from the unofficial standpoint, but on the contrary he will bring to the office of supervisor the fresh point of view of a well equipped industrial young man.

Frank Gill is determined, as supervisor, to wage a constant fight for the improvement and progress of the Sixth Ward and for the promotion of the welfare of its people. He is making a very active campaign and his many friends and supporters enthusiastically predict his election.

THE VLY

The Vly, Oct. 27—A baby shower was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Stella on Wednesday last by the Ladies' Aid of The Vly Church. Refreshments were served by the ladies and Mrs. Stella received many beautiful and useful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bleier and daughters, Barbara and Patsy, of Brooklyn, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Van Demark over the weekend.

Mrs. George Wurster is spending a week at West New York and a day at the World's Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Moses Van Demark and Mrs. H. A. Beatty and son, Vernon, made a trip to Kingston one day last week.

Mrs. Emma Korman and son, Robert Korman, and family, of Brooklyn, spent the week-end at their home in this place.

The Ladies' Aid meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. LeBouthiller on Thursday afternoon, November 2.

Mrs. Oscar Olsen was the guest of Mrs. Moses Van Demark Thursday afternoon.

Today in Washington

If League for Peace is "Communist Controlled" Does That Mean That Members Believe in Communist Doctrines?

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Oct. 28.—If the American League for Peace and Democracy is "Communist controlled" in fact, and if it can be proved that this organization advocates the overthrow of America's constitutional form of government, then members of such an organization who are government workers are now threatened with loss of their jobs.

It develops that there is already legislation on the statute books covering that point. The Hatch law has a provision in it, little noticed at the time of passage last August, which says:

"It shall be unlawful for any person employed in any capacity by any agency of the federal government, whose compensation, or any part thereof, is paid from funds authorized or appropriated by any act of Congress, to have membership in any political party or organization which advocates the overthrow of our constitutional form of government in the United States."

"Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be immediately removed from the position or office held by him, and thereafter no part of the funds appropriated by any act of Congress for such position or office shall be used to pay the compensation of such person."

But is the American League for Peace and Democracy such an organization and does membership in it constitute a violation of law on the basis of the proof offered? While the Dies committee unanimously contends that the league is "Communist controlled," does this mean that the members of the league believe in Communist doctrines? This has yet to be proved.

Many government workers who are on the "mailing list" of the league resent bitterly the publicity that has been given their names. They do not feel that being on a "mailing list" is the same as being a member, or that, being a member, they should be chastised on the basis of the proof offered thus far. One government employee writes as follows:

"I am on their mailing list. Some months more than a year ago a friend who is a member asked that I contribute a dollar to help the cause. I sympathized with most of the professed purposes of the organization and contributed the dollar. Yesterday my name appeared under headlines proclaiming the presence of 'reds' in the government. I am not a member. No one loves and reveres America and its traditions more than I, a native-born. My folks are Republican and I am Democratic. I was brought up to believe that America stood for free speech. I have always felt that as an American I must smile hard at every evidence of injustice or discrimination. And if the league professes to stand for these principles, I am not ashamed to be on their mailing list. And I challenge the Americanism of anyone who challenges an American citizen's right to have such a creed, be it even a government employee."

"The league is said to be 'communist-controlled.' I have read the testimony very carefully and have yet to find any further proof of this other than the fact that there may be communist membership, even at this time. None of the members I know are communists; none has ever remembered being in contact with communist influence. I do not refuse to contribute to the community chest, because communists probably do, although I hate and despise all that communism stands for."

The question then turns on the propriety of the action of the Dies committee in making public a mailing list, presumably because it did not have an accurate membership list. President Roosevelt calls this a "sordid procedure." Differences of opinion always arise as to the behavior of congressional committees when they invade the private rights of citizens. Thus it will be recalled that the White House did not frown on the unwarranted use by the famous lobby committee of private telegrams, a committee headed by former Senator Black of Alabama. Indeed, the senator was later elevated to the supreme court of the United States. Likewise, when a congressional committee published a list of alleged tax irregularities on the part of prominent business men, no such delicacy was felt about the procedure and the public was left to infer that men who took advantage of lawful provisions were guilty of some sort of tax evasion.

Two wrongs, of course, do not make a right and the improper use of men's names and reputations is, indeed, a sordid procedure when the facts do not justify disclosures. It will be interesting to see what proof can be offered that the individuals who joined the League for Peace and Democracy knew anything of its communistic affiliations or connections. The Dies committee doubtless will wish to give all whose names are mentioned an opportunity to clear themselves of any connection with communism. (Reproduction rights reserved)

WALLKILL

Wallkill, Oct. 27—Miss Florence Vogel of New York City visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Vogel, recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Wager, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Terwilliger, Mrs. L. C. Edsall and Mr. and Mrs. H. Stauffer of Wallkill were visitors at the World's Fair over the weekend.

Mrs. William B. Landrine visited friends at Montrose on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Chase and daughter, Phyllis, left Thursday of this week on a motor trip to the west coast. While there they will visit their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Chase, at Long Beach, Cal.

A few friends of Phyllis Chase gave her a farewell surprise party Monday evening at her home. Games were enjoyed and refreshments served. Those present were the Misses Marion Gannestahf, Lois Morehouse, Iris Cawell, Margaret Edsall of Wallkill, and the Misses Jane Smedes and Marion Silkworth, of Walden.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Chrisman of Port Byron are visiting their daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse McHugh. Other guests at the McHugh home over the weekend were Mrs. Thelma Chrisman, Henrietta and Harriet Wildman of New York City.

Lincoln D. Relyea of Mitchell Field spent a few days the past week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dayton Relyea.

Mrs. A. Devo of New York is visiting Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Lester this week.

E. C. Masten is again a patient at St. Luke's hospital, after undergoing another sinus operation Tuesday of this week.

James Smith of Albany spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence and family attended a football game at Hightstown, N. J., on Saturday between St. John's Prep School, Brooklyn, and Peddie Institute, of which their son, Jack, is a student.

Mrs. Charles Henke of Binghamton is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren V. Devo.

Warren Tobias visited his sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. George Hammesfahr, a few days the past week. His son, Richard Tobias, returned with him.

The local girl scouts enjoyed a Halloween party Wednesday evening in the scout cabin.

On Saturday afternoon the Girl Scouts will go for a hike with their leader, Mrs. L. Hincheliff.

The "Old Home Night" of the Willing Workers on Tuesday evening was a great success and after a covered dish supper with all kinds of good things to eat, a program was given with a trumpet solo by Wilkin Heine, a piano solo by Mrs. F. R. Bach, a monologue by Mrs. Caswell, a vocal solo by Mrs. Edwin Hansen, a trumpet duet by William Jacob and Marjorie DeBois, and a trio by Rupert, LeLand and Ronald White, accompanied at the piano by their mother, Mrs. White.

C. Everett Terwilliger entertained by showing moving pictures which he had taken at the World's Fair, and of Williamsburg and other points of interest in Virginia. Also one of the fireman's parade this summer and other local scenes.

Mrs. Daisy Gilbert, who was involved in an auto accident Tuesday morning, received a deep cut across the top of her head, but is resting comfortably at her home.

Mrs. Harold Titus, president of the Wallkill Woman's Club, welcomed Wednesday evening 60 members and guests at the annual gentlemen's night, which was held at the New Hurley Church hall.

Mrs. T. L. Milspaugh, president of the Walden Club, was a guest of honor. A chicken dinner was served by the Young Woman's Club of New Hurley, and an hour of entertainment and fun was enjoyed. Miss Carolyn Pengatilo and her "Tommy," a jokes and poem by Richard Mathews, piano duets by Mrs. George Parham and Mrs. Edwin Sheeley, piano solos by Miss Madeline Wendling and monologues by Mrs. Esther Bedell, Jr.

The American Legion, Cornelius Road, Post No. 1034, will hold a political stag card party at the post rooms Wednesday evening, November 1, at 8 o'clock.

William Galbraith, son, Jack, of Richmond Hill, spent a few days this week in Wallkill.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Titus expect to move next week in the Kerr house, next to Warren V. Devo's home, Buena Vista avenue. W. V. Devo has bought the Stavey residence, in which Mr. Titus now lives.

PLATTEKILL

Plattekill, Oct. 28—The Busy Bee Society of the Rossville Methodist Church, associate pastorate of Plattekill, will serve lunch in the former Benedict store on Tuesday, November 7, Election Day.

The regular meeting of the Busy Bee Society will be held Thursday afternoon, November 9, at Mrs. Samuel Dransfield's home.

The annual chicken supper and dance, sponsored by the Plattekill Grangers, will be held Thursday evening, November 9, in the Grange Hall.

The Helen Palmer W. C. T. U. will conduct a speaking contest Friday evening, November 17, in the Rossville Methodist Church. Dr. William Small of New

County Gains New Educational Institution at West Park

Former Bryn Mawr Unit Establishes At Smith Estate

Groups of Women Workers of Various Industries to Attend Sessions During Summer

Began in April

School Moved to Present Site Early Last Spring; May Be Permanent

Many faces reflecting long exposure to the reality of a work-a-day world will be brightened in the future by the light of another environment and during the inspiring interlude will come broader concepts of life.

Then light which accentuates the natural charm of the picturesque Hudson Valley will find its way to these faces and the atmosphere itself will have its part in the meaning of education.

The Hudson, at least, forms the major background of this setting where such transitions will be fulfilled and some day it will be important traditionally in the life of Ulster county's newest institution, The Hudson Shore Labor School at West Park.

An attractive group of buildings effectively conform to the natural beauty of the spot and in them a new history began with spring itself last April. These were once home to Hilda W. Smith, who gave much of her time and effort to starting the school 18 years ago, and now again perhaps, she sees the place as home with a more substantial purpose.

Four Houses Used

Four houses and one barn on the estate have been given over to the use of the school and these are on a property which slopes down from the roadside to the riverfront. The largest of these, an imposing mansion, is known as Aberdeen House, and is the second up from the river. Another is the dock house on the shore, the third, a more modest retreat which was Hilda Smith's home and called "Smith House," and the fourth, "Gate House," which is near the highway.

All these now have been dedicated largely to the purpose of adult education for persons of somewhat limited educational background, and the school it is hoped, will become established permanently in the county.

The school itself will be conducted only during the summer as was customary at Bryn Mawr where it was held each year since its beginning up until this year. Then it was known as the Bryn Mawr Summer School for Women Workers of Industry.

New Policy Announced

A new policy announced earlier this week, however, sets up the institution on more of a year-around basis, although its regular school work will not extend beyond the summer period. The new plan will allow for use of facilities to conduct various institutes and meetings throughout the year.

The student group is limited to 60 each year and among them will be several college women, who come to the school as staff assistants and to work on the dramatic and recreational programs. The latter in one sense are students and in another, act as members of the staff. They help also to raise scholarships for the workers who attend the school the following year.

The school policy is controlled by a board of managers made up of Miss Marion Park, chairman, Eleanor Lansing Dulles, treasurer, and the following other members: Mrs. Wilfred Bancroft, the Misses Edith Christensen, Mary L. Coolidge, Josephine Goldmark, Amy Hewes, Mabel Leslie, Matilda Lindsay, Sally Russian, Rose Leach and Miss Hilda W. Smith. Jean Carter is the school's director.

Students who attend the school must be between 20 and 35 years of age; must have had not less than three years wage-earning experience, two of which must have been in industry. They also must have completed the sixth grade in school and have supplemented this by further study or educational activity.

Testing Needs

The school has what virtually amounts to a five-year lease on the property. At the present time the venture is looked upon as something of an experiment to determine whether or not the present site will meet the needs of the new institution. If it does it is expected steps will be taken to acquire the property permanently.

A chief purpose of the school as explained by Miss Carter is to train women workers to think clearly and therefore more effectively carry out their responsibilities as citizens.

It is expected that girls trained at the school will be able to live richer lives and thereby contribute more to the communities in which they live. Some developed into leaders of various social and labor movements when they return back to their jobs. Miss Carter said, but it is not a purpose of the school to train women leaders in industrial fields.

"We feel the need of an independent school for individual advancement of the workers," Mrs. Carter explained, "and we offer an opportunity also for more co-operation between the college woman and the woman worker."

Workers Take Leave

The workers get a leave of absence from their jobs when they attend the school and it is the understanding of their employer that they must be allowed to return to their former jobs after completing the school course. The purpose of the school must be considered qualitatively rather than quantitatively. Miss Carter pointed out. Those who believe in its purpose, she indicated, are hopeful for an expansion of the movement, but they believe also that much effective work can be accomplished, even though the classes are small.

Male students are never admitted to the regular summer school sessions, but often they come as members of union groups or special study units which meet at the school before and after its regular summer session.

Miss Smith on a visit to England and the Scandinavian countries some time ago set up committees for the exchange of students. Subsequently two or three students from abroad have been attending the regular summer sessions. Last summer there were two students from England and one from Sweden.

All of the instructors at the school come from the larger regular women's colleges of the east and the school also draws several graduates and under-graduates from the various women's colleges to take part in the co-operative summer program.

Opened in Spring

Last Spring the staff moved in on April 18. A housewarming for 59 former students and teachers was held on May 13 and 14 and from May 27 to 31 a group from the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, met at the school. The History Workers Institute, followed from June 2 to 4.

The summer school opened June 18 and continued until August 4 with a group of 83 students and the staff. A work camp was held from August 7 to September 5. Old Home Week was held from September 16 to 23 and from October 14 to 18 the Y. W. C. A. National Business and Industrial Councils were held. A board meeting was held October 21 and on October 22 a re-union of the education committee of the work camp was held.

Miss Carter further explains the school and its purpose as follows:

It is always difficult to break old and dear ties, and the pride and joy of the school in achieving a permanent year-around home is generously mixed with sorrow that it will no longer be able to spend two months of each year on the Bryn Mawr campus.

Two facts serve to soften the sorrow and increase the joy with which it accepts its new opportunity: It is leaving the campus with the parental blessing and good wishes of Bryn Mawr College, and in moving into the former home of Hilda W. Smith, it is having a share in the realization of her dream that this home should one day become a center for workers' educational activities.

That these activities should grow out of the Bryn Mawr Summer School is peculiarly fitting for it was Hilda Smith who gave substance to President Thomas' vision of a workers' school on the Bryn Mawr campus and it was her wise and far-seeing direction through the first fourteen years of its existence that gave to the school the stability that now makes it ready to take this next logical step in its development.

On Its Own

"It seems to both college and school that the age of independence has arrived and that there is danger of arrested development unless the school faces forward and courageously accepts its broader responsibilities. It does this, as we have said, with mixed emotions—a healthy fearfulness lest it be not yet sturdy enough, physically and spiritually, to meet the challenge of independent living; and a pleasurable excitement that it has an opportunity for greater service in the field in which it has pioneered and to which it is dedicated.

"That the board of the Summer School was right in its feeling that there was a wider interest in and need for the services of the school than could be met on the campus of a woman's college available only in the summer months is finding additional proof daily as requests come in for help in planning institutes and conferences for many groups.

"There are also beginning to be murmurs about winter plans. Educational departments of unions will carry responsibility for planning and financing these institutes for their own members and the school will cooperate in planning the educational program.

New Group Accepted

"The focus of interest will, of course, continue to be the Summer School itself. A seven-week session will be held beginning in June for 60 students from the many industries employing women. These are no longer confined to such industries as the needle trades, textiles, and shoes but have extended to mass production groups with which one ordinarily associates men workers—flat glass, aluminum, rubber, automobiles.

"The national and international aspects of the school will be not only conserved but somewhat extended this year. Bringing workers together from many states and several foreign countries seems to be the board one of the unique and significant functions of the Bryn Mawr, and hence of the Hudson Shore School.

Knowledge Exchanged

"In the midst of this first-hand contact with and discussion of the world situation, there will go forward continuous exchange and analysis of experience among automobile workers from Kansas City or Detroit, rubber workers from Toronto and Akron, laundry or garment workers from Brooklyn, textile workers from New England and the South, skilled milliners and dressmakers from New York's exclusive 'uptown shops,' aluminum workers from Pittsburgh, and hosiery workers from New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Under the guidance of skilled teachers these workers will acquire background for better understanding of their problems and be better equipped to carry the responsibility placed on every citizen in a democracy. In attempting to describe the unique opportunity offered by the Summer School one of last month's students said, 'It's the chance to discuss what has happened to us with teachers who can add it all together and make it mean something.'

"This does not result in a narrow program, for 'what has happened to us' covers the whole range of human experience, and teachers of literature, science, history, and psychology play as im-

An announcement earlier this week that the Hudson Shore Labor School will remain open for institutes and various other educational purposes throughout the year, came as the first step in what may be a more important future for the 18-year-old institution. The school set out on its own for the first time last April at the Hilda W. Smith estate at West Park.

Its main purpose is to offer summer courses for women workers in industry and provide opportunity for college women to cooperate in the work. Other educational meetings are held at various times of the year, however, and the school appears to be growing gradually to one of greater influence in its specialized field. Shown above are typical scenes at the school during the height of its season.

Top left shows a group intently following the words of a teacher in the science class. At right some of the college women, who paid for the privilege of working are touching up the rear side of Aberdeen House, one of the buildings given over by Hilda W. Smith, to the purpose of the school. Next at left is a typical class at work and at right a group of college young women and men are shown talking with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, first lady of the land, who pays occasional visits at the school. At lower left is a group of the women workers who attended the regular session last summer.

OLIVE BRIDGE

Olive Bridge, Oct. 27—Grant Oakley of Poughkeepsie is spending his usual vacation with his nephew, Olson Oakley and enjoying the hunting season.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil M. Gray and daughter, Lois, were dinner guests of her mother, Mrs. Katie Davis, Wednesday evening.

Those who called recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Darville J. Boice included Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Trowbridge, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Trowbridge and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Marshall and son, Harry.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Nickerson and daughter of New City spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Le Roy Davis.

The Mackey family from New York City spent the week-end at their summer home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stanbridge and daughter, Jean, spent Monday with relatives in Binghamton.

Miss Elinor Boice was a dinner guest at the home of Joan Stanbridge Wednesday evening, the occasion being Joan's fifth birthday.

A number from this place enjoyed the turkey supper held at Ashokan Thursday evening.

Prayer meeting was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Lena Bush.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Winchell were dinner guests Monday evening of Mrs. Kathlyn and Henry Merrihue at Krumville.

Miss Ethel Roosa, who has been spending the past few weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roosa, has returned to New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Winchell called Tuesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Merrihue at Ashokan.

Several people from this place are planning to attend the oyster supper held at the old Davis homestead on the corner at Krumville on Wednesday evening, November 1.

Mrs. Harold R. Wilson of Central Valley is spending a few days with relatives at Glen Spring farm.

Mrs. Leona Gessner of Schenectady is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Donald Bishop, at West Shokan Heights.

Mrs. Jennie Myers is spending a few days with Mrs. Asa Barringer, at Samsonville.

That government jobs are still in demand is indicated by the fact that a recent examination conducted by the Civil Service Commission approximately 100,000 people took the test in the effort to secure appointments to stenographic positions.

On Tiny Isle of Timor

Lying about 300 miles off the northwest coast of Australia, the island of Timor, until recent years, was just another of the Sunda islands which form an arc marking the northeastern extremity of the Indian ocean. There was a Portuguese settlement on the coast a century before Captain John Smith arrived at Jamestown; and the Dutch landed on another part of Timor about the time of the famous Smith-Pocahontas life-saving episode. But today the island shows few effects of long contact with the western world.

Aviation has thrust Timor into the spotlight. In 1934 it was reported that Great Britain wished to purchase the island for an air and naval base. In November, 1933, it reached the news headlines when one of the three British airplanes which took off from Ismailia, Egypt, on the world's record non-stop flight to Australia, was forced down at Koepang because of fuel shortage.

Timor has only a few population centers large enough to be called towns. Koepang, capital and largest town of the Dutch portion of the island, has only 5,500 inhabitants; Dili, chief town of the Portuguese portion, has only 3,500 residents. The island is without railroads, and roads passable by automobiles are few beyond the borders of the towns. Steamships link the Timor ports with neighboring islands and continental harbors, bringing cotton goods, oil and wine, and taking away Timor coffee, copra, hides, cacao, shells, wax and sandalwood.

Timor natives are largely a racial mixture of Malayan, Polynesian and Papuan blood and are divided into numerous tribes. Fighting among tribesmen is frequent. For this warfare bows and arrows are the weapons. Blow guns and small darts are used for hunting. The wardrobe of some native men is only a loin cloth; others wear two-piece cotton garments and turbans. The women adorn themselves in colorful sarongs and shawls. Tattooing, done with crude instruments that often cause blood poisoning and death, is popular. Custom permits a tribesman to have as many wives as he desires to care for his large or-room house of wood and thatched roof. At the front door of these abodes, and among the fruit trees and growing ps, palm leaves are placed in the belief that they keep away evil spirits.

YESTERDAY, they open the box, but instead of jewels, find pebbles wrapped in paper, and love letters. Two documents that there are two kinds of paper, bond and newspaper. She studies the scraps into two piles.

Chapter 13

MICHAEL tapped his right temple meditatively and fingered the papers. Tuck put her hand over her eyes and concentrated. The District Attorney was listening, his hand shading his eyes.

Michael picked up the larger pile of papers and crumpled them absently. "Eighteen," he muttered. "Eighteen," Tuck echoed under her breath.

The District Attorney bent forward suddenly and looked at Bunny. "It's a cool night," he told her. "Strange how cool it gets at an evening."

Tuck looked at him. She gasped. "You've got it," she said. Michael raised his eyebrows. "Eighteen!" she cried. "Eighteen, and there are thirty all together. That leaves twelve, Michael."

"I have been led to believe so," he said gravely. "And—?" Her words fairly rang in his ears. "Twelve of them, on a fine chain. Don't you see, Michael? It is the diamonds!"

Michael looked down at the pebbles incredulously. They lay all together in a little heap on the table. He picked one up, and fingered it. "Damn!" he said fervently.

"Damn, Michael?" Bunny inquired politely. "We shouldn't have mixed them. Maybe the child's right. Maybe twelve of them do mean something, although they're certainly all rocks together."

"Why are they wrapped up? I don't get it." "To keep 'em all nice and warm, like the letters," he said soberly. "Don't be a fool. Could he have written a letter on the paper that wrapped these pebbles, then torn it all up into little bits like this?"

"What for?" "How do I know?" "There's no writing on the paper."

"Those pencil marks. Maybe it's one word, in big thin letters. Turn up. All the marks I found were on the smooth paper. It means something."

"I think they kept the pebbles to count the days by," Tuck said moodily. "One for each day of the month. If they sent each other five pebbles it meant they would meet on the fifth."

"Tuck," said Michael. "Come on with your pencil marks, Bunny. Her mind's wandering. Suddenly, looking up from the paper in her hand, those lines go right along the edge. If the paper were torn exactly straight they wouldn't show at all."

Michael stared at her. "Then along the mark, eh? Well, then a choked little voice, 'we can fit them back together again the way he tore them. Because if he tore them on lines he must have meant—'"

John Forrester had left his chair again, and stood at the desk. He looked down at the twelve bits of bond paper, pushed into a heap by Michael's long restless fingers. "It's a picture puzzle," he said slowly.

"I never was good at puzzles," Michael said. "The puzzle was not easy to solve, but time and patience did it at last. On some of the papers pencillings were not to be found even after the most careful scrutiny; the consequence was that no one knew which side of those pieces should go upmost, and as all of the bits seemed to be of much the same shape, roughly triangular, for a time it seemed as if they were getting nowhere. But Tuck started them on the right track when she pushed to one side four pieces which were less triangular and more oblong than the others."

"Shiny and Dull" "It's some sort of pattern," she said absently. "Not just any old way." The fingered the four papers she had pushed aside. She put them in a row next each other, but they did not fit. She tried making a square with them, one at each side, but they were not wide enough. Then, systematically, she picked up each of the other eight pieces and fitted it, first one side up and then the other, to each of the oblongs, until she found where it belonged. That was the correct procedure; and in a short time the fitted pattern lay before them.

The four oblongs, it seemed, radiated at right angles from a common center, and between each pair two long triangles fitted neatly. The outer circumference of the pattern was a rounded square and the center was a round hole.

Tuck stared at it. Bunny tapped absently on the table-top. Michael pulled his ear.

"There's something about it that looks sort of familiar," he muttered to himself. "But I'm hanged if I get it. Do you, dad? Mean anything to you?"

John Forrester grunted unintelligently. "Pebbles," Tuck murmured. "Pebbles, Patterns." "Is there any way," Bunny asked suddenly, of knowing which pebbles were wrapped in those pieces of paper, even if we have mixed them; are they all just alike or not?"

Michael looked at her approvingly and pushed the heap of pebbles into a long row. "They aren't quite all alike," Tuck said dubiously. "Are they? It seems to me some of them aren't quite as shiny as the rest."

"Isn't it the way the light strikes them, Tuck?" "I don't know. Can you see it?" "I don't think I can, not quite."

"I believe I can," Bunny said. "That third one looks a little muddy. Is that what you mean, Tuck? Those on either side of it are black and shiny."

"That's what I mean. Now... Bunny, you watch and tell me if I'm right. I'm going to move out of line all the ones that look black and shiny." She put her finger out and went down the line slowly, carefully, pushing here and there a pebble out of line.

"There they are," she said, when she had finished. "You've got sixteen black ones, and fourteen dull ones, Tuck. Bunny counted."

"Try it again," Michael said with a queer note of excitement. Tuck went down the line again. "Here's one I'm not sure of," she murmured. "It might be either."

She picked it up and scrutinized it closely. "I believe it's a black one, though."

She went on; and when the experiment was over, they had eighteen black and shining pebbles in one heap and twelve, a little duller in the other.

"Those are the pebbles that came out of these pieces, then," Michael said. "Now, what the devil-gosh, this is getting exciting."

Bunny shut her eyes tightly, and leaned back in her chair. Tuck wandered around the room, head bent, in deep abstraction. Gordon Deane's dog, next door, set up a furious barking. Tuck stepped out on the sun porch, and peered anxiously about for Agamemnon. The garden, white in the moonlight, lay before her.

"The pattern!" she called. Michael in a strange voice. "Look," she said. "There it is! There it is, Michael! Bunny!"

"What, Tuck? Where is it?" "The pattern!—don't you see? The pattern! I knew it was familiar."

"I don't see anything but the sundial, Tuck... is that the pattern?" "No, don't be so stupid. That's the hole! That's the thing that he left out, the sundial! Those long oblongs are the four paths, and the triangles are the flower beds!"

Michael straightened up suddenly. "That's right, by George!" "And he left out the sundial," Tuck said to herself. "He left out the sundial!"

"It made one piece too many, Tuck." "Umhm." She stared out at it, while under the moonlight. "It's very pretty," she said. "It's too bad he left it out." Her eyes danced suddenly, and she turned on them.

"Don't you see?" she cried. "Can't you guess?" "I admit I can't," Michael shook his head.

"Nor I, Tuck." "That sundial... it's carved out of something, sandstone or something. I suppose. And around the bottom is a row of round stones; and around the top just at the edge of the face, is another row of round stones, only they're littler. Pebbles." She ran indoors and sized one of the little, dalled pebbles, to rub it with a moistened finger.

"Whitewash," she said succinctly. "He couldn't wash all of it off." Michael whooped suddenly. "If you aren't the brightest girl!" he said happily. "That's where they are!"

"The diamonds, Michael?" asked Bunny. "I suppose it must be." "Huh? We better wait until it's darker, Michael!"

"No." "In a moment all four were grouped about the sundial, staring down at its calm face excitedly. Tuck touched the row of pebbles around the outside. "They are exactly the same size," she told them.

"There are a hundred and forty-four of them," Michael murmured after a moment. "I suppose that's what gave the old boy his idea. It'll probably be every twelfth pebble."

"But where do we start? Michael, I think I should just collapse if this turned out to be a mistake! I couldn't bear it."

Michael touched a pebble slowly. "I think this is the first one, right at the top of the sundial," he decided. He shook it with his fingers; it was firm, although some of the whitewash came off in his hand. He took out his penknife and thrust it underneath, and the pebble came out of its setting easily.

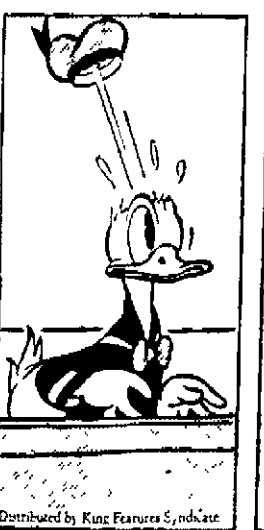

Michael cut at it with his knife. "Right!" he said. "That's no pebble. It's a lump of wax—and here's the first diamond, my dears."

Deep-Water Swimming Provided there is sufficient water to float the body, the depth of water makes no difference to the swimmer, its buoyancy being the same in both cases. The popular belief that swimming is easier in deep water is incorrect, though perhaps the mental effect has some influence. A person swimming in shallow water knows that on the least fatigue he may stop swimming and stand on the bottom; in deep water he knows he cannot do this, but must exert himself to swim well and under these circumstances it may seem easier to him.

Parent-Teacher Ass'n

Lake Katrine

The Lake Katrine Parent-Teacher Association will sponsor a Halloween party for the children of the school Tuesday evening, October 31, at 7 o'clock. The first four grades will have a party of their own, while the boys and girls from the fifth grade up will be entertained with a little more "sophistication."

There will be the usual type of Halloween decorations, plus games and a grand march in which all the children will participate. A prize will be awarded for the best pumpkin. Jack-O-Lantern entered, which must be the handwork of the children. The party sponsored for the older children will feature dancing and a spook fortune teller in addition to games.

The Lake Katrine Parent-Teacher Association is attempting to teach that Halloween does not give anyone license to do mean things that would not be all right on some other occasion; no one, even a young person, should seek to get his pleasure at someone else's pain; to destroy property or to damage property is just as wrong on Halloween as on any other occasion, and that there are plenty of legitimate ways of having fun on Halloween without causing damage or pain to someone else.

Farms in New York state are sold to several different types of buyers. Some go to persons with considerable recent farming experience in the state, some to young men brought up on New York farms, some to city persons who have previously lived on farms, some to farmers from other sections of the country, and some to city persons without previous farm experience.

Teacher—What animal is satisfied with the least nourishment? Robert—The moth, teacher. It eats nothing but holes.

The qualities that make a nation great are never all vested in a single individual but must remain vested in the people of the nation.

Critic—The picture of the horse is good, but where is the wagon? Artist—Oh, the horse will draw that.

Now and then a "pin head" thinks it is smart to refuse to give a reporter a courteous reply when asked about an item of news.

Teacher—Junior, can you tell me what a hypocrite is? Junior—Yes, m. It's a boy who comes to school these days with a smile on his face.

WEST SHOKAN

West Shokan, Oct. 28—Larr. Kelder made a week-end visit to his West Shokan Heights country home before making an air tour of the far west and southern states in connection with his business activities.

Mrs. Charles Gustafson attended the recently held conference of the Reformed Church held at the church of that denomination in Stone Ridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Emory Trowbridge of Kingston spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund C. Burgher.

Sixteen names were added to the registration rolls in Olive election district, No. 2, at the second day of registration held Saturday afternoon and evening. The total number of voters enrolled is 571, which is 47 more than last year. Monday Chairman Charles H. Weidner made a trip to Kingston, filing with the county board of elections the registration returns also the absentee ballot applications. This trip was made necessary due to the fact that West Shokan mail might fail to place the absentee applications in the hands of the county election board within the time limit deadline established by law.

Elwyn Davis and daughter, Cornelia, were Kingston callers Monday afternoon. Last week visitors and callers entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gustafson included: Mrs. H. Gillespie and Mrs. Clifford Cole of Marlborough, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Elliott of Hurley, Miss E. Thomas and nephew, Cwynne of Plattsburgh, also Mr. and Mrs. William Poal and son, David, of Ridgefield Park, N. J. and Mrs. Mary Miller of Kingston. The latter group with Mr. and Mrs. Gustafson attended the Ladies' Aid meat loaf supper which was served at the Baptist Church Wednesday evening, October 18.

Hickory Hill Farm late October activities included the housing of pullets from the summer range and handling and judging males to be used as breeders. Hundreds of breeding males of the Weidner strain of white leghorns are raised yearly for sale and use at home.

On Tuesday Elwyn Davis and daughter, Miss Cornelia Davis, moved to Albany, accompanied by friends, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Van Ness of Woodstock. The trip of approximately 225 miles, was made via the up valley route, passing Gilboa Reservoir and dam, the Schoharie Valley where friends and historic points of interest were visited, including Middleburg Cemetery, which overlooks the scenic valley and is the last resting place of Timothy Murphy, famous Revolutionary British and Indian fighter, and venerated hero of old Schoharie. A stop was made briefly at the old Stone Fort museum in Schoharie. It was learned from the caretaker, Mr. Vrooman, that over 18,000 visitors have registered this year, which is approximately 2,000 above last year's total. Miss Davis also visited the Cobleskill State School from which she graduated last June in the home economics class. She remained in Albany where she has accepted a responsible position in one of the state institutions, the Albany Children's Home.

Many local people note with regret the passing of Frank Ennist of Kingston, a native of the town of Olive and whose lifetime up until the Ashokan Reservoir construction exodus was a resident of the village of West Shokan. As a young man he held a year-around position at L. P. Boice's sawmill, and later for several years clerked in D. W. Matthews' store. Mr. Ennist built and conducted for some years the general store in Olive Bridge, now in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Dorville Boice, preceding the removal with his family to Kingston.

Mrs. William Wagner and family, well known Main street residents for several years, moved to New York city Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Winkler and family of Main street will reportedly soon move to Lackawack where he commutes daily to and from his employment on the waterworks project.

Miss Jennie Kerr and Mrs. Oliver Tweedy favored with a pleasant soprano and alto duet, "Let the Tower Lights be Burning." Sunday afternoon in connection with the church services held in the community Baptist Church. Mrs. Chase Davis presided regularly as the organist. The Rev. Frank Bailey presented as his sermon topic, "The Three R's." His message was well received by the congregation which was of the usual number.

Ollie Crawford was a caller from Olive Bridge Monday afternoon.

Pennsylvania Cornhusking Champion

Shucking at an average speed of 41 ears a minute, Stanley Yeager, 45, (above) farmer from York county, won the Pennsylvania cornhusking championship for the second straight year. Here he shows the technique he used at the contest, near York. He'll compete in national meet at Lawrence, Kas.

Five-Cent Admissions, Day Off at School Sends Hordes Of 'Hoppers' to World's Fair

New York, Oct. 28 (AP)—Ten thousand (estimated) signatures, scrawled with pencil and lipstick, bore testimony today of the wildest day in the history of the New York World's Fair.

Some 200,000 teen-age children and younger jam-packed the $155,000,000 exposition yesterday, drawn by a special nickel admission price and a free holiday from school.

Like a plague of jitterbug grasshoppers, they swarmed over the Flushing Flats in a crush so great that more than 200 hard-boiled Gotham cops gave up hope of keeping order. Fair officials were forced several times to throw open emergency gates and let thousands of persons in free to save them from being pressed to pulp by shouting throngs behind.

In spite of all precautions, two children suffered arm fractures and 70 more were treated for hurts ranging from bruised shins to black eyes. The only adult casualty was a gas meter reader who made the mistake of bending over to read a meter as a group of boys were passing. Their boots spun him head over heels.

Two hundred children were lost. All carefully spent their last pennies before appealing to police—for free rides home.

Several foreign exhibits shut their doors against the horde. Food companies found sample exhibits exhausted early by voracious raiders.

Brass-toned amusement zone barker, trying to keep an overflow of youthful customers in line, were outshouted by their joyous audience.

In Frank Buck's Jungleland, lions covered fearfully in their dens. Keepers said some of the monkeys, peppered by thousands of peanuts, had become neurotic. Other keepers said it was only indignation.

Childish autographs written everywhere that adolescent ingenuity could contrive—on gleaming wall, trylon, perisphere and hot dog stand. Dozens of windows were broken. Fair officials said the total damage, however, was relatively small.

The verdict of Dr. Harold G. Campbell, superintendent of schools: "I never saw such a group of well-behaved children anywhere."

The verdict of fair officials: "Things will never seem quite the same."

awaited autumn drencher is as great as ever.

Work continued on the WPA road project up Watson Hollow. Several laid-off workers were recently recalled.

Sunday night Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gustafson entertained a visit from his niece and husband, the Rev. and Mrs. Daniel Brink, of Ridgefield Park, N. J. The couple were en route to New Baltimore to visit his father, the Rev. Henry Brink.

The latter will be recognized among older readers as pastor of the Shokan Dutch Reformed church 30 years ago.

Mrs. Charles Gustafson made a business trip to Kingston Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Lange and her sister, Miss Marion Duller, were here from Yonkers over the week-end.

Party at St. Remy

Last evening the members of St. Remy Volunteer Fire Company held a party for the Ladies Auxiliary, their families and friends. There was a special entertainment program featuring these numbers: Miss Blossom Barnett of St. Remy in a toe and tap dance, Miss Charlotte Havlin of St. Remy in tap and toe dances; Wilson Tinnie of Port Ewen, accordion selections; Miss Margaret Skimmerhorn and Philip Green of Rifton in guitar selections and a puppet show with Phil Fischer, Jr., Albert Dalluge and Harry Javelin handling the strings for the sketch of a firemen's meeting. There were noise makers distributed, and a luncheon served by the refreshment committee. Chief Hoffman thanked all present for the fine cooperation between the Ladies' Auxiliary and the firemen and also for the donation of $25 toward the purchase of a nozzle for the new apparatus. There was dancing after the luncheon.

FASHIONS and HOUSEHOLD HINTS FOR WOMEN

Your Screen Test

1. Name three young actresses (one of whom is shown in the picture) whose first names are Brenda.

2. What movie singing star's actor husband, who has not been seen much since their marriage, is devoted to nearly all of his time to music and composed a song ("Let Me Always Sing") which his wife introduced recently on her personal appearance tour?

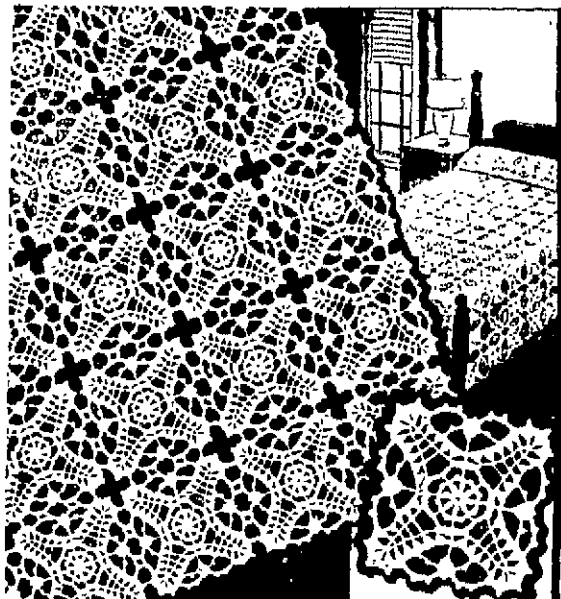

3. What newly released picture takes place mostly in the U. S. Senate chamber and is one of the few movies ever to show actual reproduction of the upper house chamber?

4. Name four stars (two of them comprise a well-known team) of comedy shorts who now are making pictures which may prove their comebacks.

5. Identify: (a) He's an M-G-M producer, married to the daughter and niece, respectively, of two brothers who own a rival studio; (b) She's a star of Swedish films and recently was widely acclaimed for her work in her first English-speaking picture; (c) She recently was awarded the prominent lead opposite Paul Muni in "We Are Not Alone," principally because of her work in "The Old Maid"; (d) She has just turned 16 (October 16) but made a hit as an ingenue in "The Rains Came."

Count 20 points for each question correctly answered. A score of 60 is good, 80 is excellent, and 90 or above is colossal.

U. S. Designers Fear War May Cut Off French Ideas

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Fashion Editor

A number of American designers are at work on the creation of fashions without Paris aid.

Many of them believe the American fashion world is facing the most critical period of its life.

The war has raised the question whether Paris will be able to continue its participation on the fashion front. Soon after the war was started nearly all the big houses on which the New York garment center has leaned so long for inspection, closed. Now most of them are opening again, expecting to produce small midseason collections.

But more big questions loom ahead. Can Paris, beset by the economic and psychological handicaps of war, continue to produce new fashions which have zip? If she can, will the American fashion world be able to get what Paris produces? If not, what will America do?

"Create for yourselves," say some New York designers and the little group of designers who have originated some fashions of their own. "None of us wants to profit by the trouble which has struck Europe. But the situation exists and it gives American designers a chance to show what they can do."

Some say they have no intention of trying to go abroad while the war lasts or of importing models from the coming Paris midseason collections. They are deep in work on their own designs for resort and advance spring wear.

But there is another sizable contingent in the style mart which clings doggedly to the hope of continuing work with Paris. Most of its members have no aspiration to the title of "designer." They manufacture clothes in volume to sell and long have clung to Paris' guiding hand. If they can no longer hold to that hand, they feel they will be in the dark, and they view the prospect with gloom.

"Who's going to settle such questions as skirt length and silhouette?" they cry. "There's not a strong enough leadership in America to do it. In this business of fashion somebody's got to be boss, or the whole style world's in chaos."

Nobody tries to answer that question yet. But in Seventh avenue skyscrapers and 47th street workrooms designers are at grips with the problem of collections which will show what they can do.

First problem they tackled was fabrics, since quality and originality of weave are important factors in the inspiration and creation of new silhouettes. A few say they expect to continue getting a certain amount of European materials for a time at least, but a number declare they have been making more use of American fabrics than was generally supposed and are working with American fabric manufacturers to create new weaves.

Here is one of the near ankle length frocks for daytime wear after 5 o'clock, designed by Louise Barnes Gallagher. Its designer thinks that skirts of this length, which haven't been worn in more than a decade, may be on their way back. This one is designed of gray crepe and worn with squirrel accessories. Notice the boots.

Helen, Cookman, whose coats and suits are famous, is using in her new collection a number of American fabrics woven to meet her specifications and dyed in the subtle hues she likes.

Louise Barnes Gallagher, whose costumes are known throughout the American fashion world, is

Amazing Women

Indiana's Police Are Back-Stopped By a Lady G-Man

Indianapolis — The "Lady G-man of Indiana" has helped many a policeman in these parts get his man.

She is Marie Grot, red-headed and 35, head of the state's criminal investigation bureau and believed to be the country's highest paid woman identification officer. Her salary is $2,400 a year.

"Miss Grot is doing splendid work," says Don Stivers, superintendent of Indiana state police. "She has been head of the bureau since 1929."

She had been clerk in the identification quarters. This is how she got her promotion, says Stivers. "I noticed the other employees in the division looked to Miss Grot for orders, so she was placed in charge."

Glove Washing Hints

To clean washable leather gloves (and make sure when you buy them whether or not they are washable), put them on the hands and wash well in luke-warm soap suds. Rinse through lukewarm water. Carefully pull off, wrong-side out, and wash the wrong side by immersing them in suds. Rinse again and quickly dip into very frothy soap suds. Lay the gloves on a thick towel, pat out as much of the water as possible. Carefully pull them into shape and blow into the fingers. Let them dry in a moderate place—never near heat. Several times while they are drying, gently pull the fingers into shape.

Efficiency experts say that a person tires more quickly under a poor light, and school teachers have discovered that children behave better and do better work in a well-lighted than in a poorly-lighted classroom. For information on home and school lighting, send a post card to the Office of Publication, Roberts Hall, Ithaca, N. Y., for a free copy of bulletin E-374.

A piano is usually less noticeable in a room when it is framed by some wall space on both sides.

Cold water should be used for soaking dishes in which eggs, milk, sugar, or starch have been cooked.

Common Courtesy

—Going To The Movies

When a boy takes a girl to the movies he should suggest that she wait for him in the lobby while he stands in line for the tickets. She doesn't need to stand out in the rain or snow.

He should remove his hat and coat in the lobby, not wait till he gets to his seat where he'll interrupt the view of those in back of him. The couple should let the usher lead them to satisfactory seats, the girl following the usher, the boy following her. If there are no ushers the boy should lead the girl to a seat, letting her enter the row first.

As soon as they are seated, he should offer to help her off with her coat. Most young women prefer to sit on their coats, with the arms and shoulders draped across the back.

The young man may then fold up his own coat and place it, with his hat, underneath his seat or on a vacant seat. Or he'll hold them on his lap to nobody's end sit on them by accident.

When leaving the theatre, the boy leads the way out, waiting at the end of the row until the girl joins him.

Rich Looking Curtains You Can Make Yourself

Beautifully Double Window

So handsome are these fringed curtains with their graceful swags! They make an ordinary double window the high point of the room.

In rose or silver rayon damask they are especially lovely—and the fringe trimming is effective in either a matching or a contrasting hue.

The formal swag valance for each window is cut the width of the top casing plus a generous allowance at sides for turn-ins. To allow for draping, cut the material twice the depth of the finished swag, shape lower edge and slant ends as the diagram shows.

Valances and side draperies, too, will look richer if lined with an inexpensive satin. Then you apply the fringe with a simple running stitch, hang draperies on rods, tack valances to valance board.

How to make the lovely frothy glass curtains, cut them so they'll hang full and even?

Follow the easy directions and diagrams given in our 32-page booklet. Tells how to make glass curtains, drapery-curtains, draperies, casement curtains, valances, cornices. Gives tips on fabrics, colors, trimmings.

Helps for Housewives

Here is a new mince-meat trick: Spread a one-inch layer of mince-meat on a sheet of rich biscuit dough. Roll it and quickly fit it into a greased loaf pan. Bake 30 minutes and serve warm with lemon sauce.

Directly under the skin of potatoes is a valuable nutritional layer so, whenever possible, cook potatoes in their jackets. The skin can then be peeled off easily without loss of food value.

If you have any left-over meat and gravy why not make a pastry roll? Spread the meat, mixed in with the gravy, on biscuit dough, roll it and fit it into a greased loaf pan or baking dish. Bake about 30 minutes and serve warm with a vegetable sauce.

Save your scraps of soap. After they've hardened put them through the food chopper. You'll have some soap flakes you can put to many uses. Be sure the soap is hard before you try to grind it.

Five-year-old Doris La Rosa, clapped a small toy bell to her upper lip and a few seconds later found she couldn't remove it. Neither could her parents. Doris underwent a hospital anaesthetic which doctors said relaxed her muscles so they could unloose the toy.

To make sure that a fabric can be washed without harm to color, texture, or finish, squeeze a sample (or an inconspicuous part of the garment) in lukewarm suds for five minutes; then rinse, dry and compare it with the unwashed material.

Milk is the sole food of the newborn infant, and continues to be a main part of his diet throughout childhood, because of its importance in growth.

Kaltenborn War Comment

Students that have gathered here have focussed the eyes of the world on the European where states are plotting the paths which lead to war or peace. In the opinion of the news by H. V. Kaltenborn, dean of all radio stations, became a high-class radio program of bookups during the tense when millions stayed up after night for last news flashes.

Kaltenborn, whose clear, professional voice has been over the net-work from times a day and who will address audiences from the high school in November 16 through the Kingston College Club, needs no publicity build up to audiences.

He stands in the front-rank of interpreters, drawing upon his own knowledge of European history to give his audience a picture of each critical and its significance and the result.

In his public speaking, who is newspaper days spent as he devoted to his Kaltenborn was a natural. He does not allow himself become wholly dependent on collected by others. In several months of each broadcast, he has maintained hand contacts with the that make news.

Kaltenborn will bring to Kingston audience a factual, objective interpretation of latest happenings in the of today and it is expected he will deal heavily on the of war in Europe.

Members of the audience will be permitted to ask questions following the lecture and facilities on hand for the questions of Mr. Kaltenborn.

Soloists in Church Concert, Nov. 14

GERALD HOLT

Gerald D. Holt will be one of the soloists at the concert given at Comforter Hall November 14. Among his numbers will be "Torna de Sorrento" by Curtis Toesli's "Serenade"; "Beautiful Dreamer" by Foster; and "Kathleen Mavourneen" by Crouch. Zaven Melik, well-known baritone of this city, who will also be one of the soloists at the concert, will include in his selection of songs the following: "The Two Grenadiers" (in Russian) by R. Schumann; "The Volga Boatman" (also in Russian); "The Blind Ploughman" by Clark; and "Love's Old Sweet Song" by Molloy.

Selections sung by the large choir group from St. Paul's Lutheran, Wurts Street Baptist and the Comforter Church will be: "Walk In The Light" by Prutting; "The Heavens are Declaring" by Beethoven; "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem" by Maunder; and "The Lost Chord" by Sullivan. In addition there will be two women's trios by the women of the chorus and also two male voice numbers.

D. Donald Hicks, pianist, has consented to play one selection, "Seguidillas" by Albaniz. He is a member of the Comforter choir although he has recently become the organist of the Port. Ewen Reformed Church.

This concert is informal. The public is invited. A silver offering is to be taken.

The members of Hemlock Grange at Portland, Connecticut, are very proud of the fact that Senator John A. ## Dressing for a Five O'clock Wedding

Dear Mrs. Post: I am invited to a wedding in church at five o'clock and to the reception afterward. This reception is being given at a club and I understand there is to be dancing as well as dinner. What type of dress do you advise for a woman guest, and for her husband?

Answer: A becoming daytime dress with long skirt—if you have such a dress. Otherwise, a street-length skirt will be all right especially if the dress is light in color and therefore less suggestive of street wear. Wear a hat with either dress. Your husband should wear formal day clothes: cutaway coat, dark striped trousers, white shirt, etc.

Bride's Clothes

Dear Mrs. Post: Have you ever seen an ivory wedding dress (quite deep) and a white wedding veil? My dress is of ivory and now a friend insists that I take her lovely veil instead of going to the expense of getting one. I would like to wear hers but wondered about the difference in color of the two. Some friends tell me they have seen this combination and it looked all right. Have you ever seen it and what do you think?

Answer: Tulle is so very transparent it ought to look lovely unless you have too much of it bunched around your head. So thick a gathering as to make the whiteness of the veil very apparent next to the cream of the dress might not look very well. The only way to do is to try it on with the dress and see. As a matter of fact, a slight difference in the tint of white adds to rather than detracts from the effect.

Traveling With a Young Child

Dear Mrs. Post: When my husband and I travel with our young child, what arrangements can we make for him when stopping at a hotel? Can we have him in our room and can we leave him in the room asleep when we go out in the evening? Will a hotel look out for the child if we notify them that he is coming? How do we register the boy?

Answer: You can always have a crib put in your room in every hotel. It is possible that the hotel can provide a maid to sit nearby while you are out; possibly there is a chambermaid on duty who could hear him if he calls. Or if your only fear for him is of a disturbing noise—an alarm of fire for instance—you can tell the house detective that the child is alone. Whether it is certain that he will stay asleep while you're gone, or not be frightened should he wake up alone, is something which only you can answer. (Released by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Bazaar to Close

The bazaar being held at St. Peter's school hall will close tonight. Since the opening last Tuesday evening over 600 people have patronized the affair, exclusive of Wednesday and Friday afternoons when the school children attended. Last evening the Christian Mothers' Society served a clam chowder supper and the demand was so great as to clean out the ladies' stock. The doors will open tonight at 8 o'clock. Hot lunch and refreshments will be served throughout the evening and many forms of entertainment, including dancing, will be provided. The public is invited.

To Hold Card Party

The Guild of All Saints' Episcopal Church will hold a card party Friday evening, November 3, for the benefit of church school Christmas fund.

Herzog's Guidepost

To better living

THIS is a tough assignment today, having to talk about a screw-driver with a clutch, American boyhood's future, a one-sixth h. p. motor, and ten essentials for a bridegroom—all in one column.

It all hinges on the place of a tool in a man's life, however, so let's start there.

When a workman has a good tool, and he becomes skilled in its use, that tool is an extension of his power. The better the tool and the greater his skill, the more power. So naturally we like to have workmen know what is bigger and better in tools.

Let's take a walk over to where Bill's working, and see. Well, Bill's working with one of our screw drivers that has an adjustable tension clutch. The idea is, he can control the screwdriver better. There, watch him throw the clutch. See? keeps a man from ruining his machine sometimes.

A new tool extends the range of a man's work. With the busy season on, how about some up-to-date tools? We're glad to demonstrate any. If you're kind of curious about some tool, just amble in and ask to see it. Try it. Get the feel of it in your hand.

It's a fine thing to build bridges, execute a Boulder Dam, or send up a skyscraper, but if you never got your chance at the colossal, he-man exploits, did you ever try standing at a lathe in your own little workshop, and experience the thrill of watching a piece of rough lumber transformed into a graceful candlestick, or flower bowl, or ash tray, or lamp base, or clothes tree—under your own chisel?

Man, you want to try it!

This is the machine age, the day of the assembly line, when a man learns, not how to make a thing himself, but how to make the machine go that makes part of the thing that joins another thing some other man makes.

This is also the age of the shortage of skilled mechanics and craftsmen.

But the day is not lost. If a man's occupation doesn't give him a chance to do something creative, he can rig up a little place of his own in which to make things, can't he? So long as a man can equip a little workshop down in the basement, say, he won't miss building bridges. Set a boy up with a good tool chest, and maybe it's the beginning of his learning a good and profitable trade.

If we worry too much, use our muscles too little, spend more time than we ought passively watching movies or in front of the radio, as the scientists say we do, what can offset it better than a few tools and the knack of using them. It's fun. And it pays.

More than one idle carpenter raised his spirits and added to the lonely "singles" in his pocket by getting out his tools and making something somebody wanted to buy.

More than one out-of-sorts husband began to whistle tunes from "The Merry Widow" after getting out his tools and doing a slick little repair job around the house.

More than one boy of today who faces bleak prospects in the crowded professions, has usefulness and security ahead of him when he learns the use of tools that will allow him to fill spots vacant today because of the shortage of skilled labor.

There's really nothing more to say now except that if anybody wants to equip a boy with a tool chest including those practical tools every home ought to have, we'll be glad to help, or make suggestions.

If anybody wants to start fixing up a hobby-workshop of his own, we've got a lathe that will be the right beginning point, as well as the most popular little woodworking lathe ever built. We've got all the accessories you might want to add from time to time, as well as motors from one-sixth h. p., up.

Now, one pertinent question to Mr. Newlywed: You're wondering how she can fuss so much over getting silver, linen, china to match the wallpaper and what-not, but—are you prepared yourself? A man should think twice before stepping over the threshold of the home in which he will be master, unless equipped at least with hammer, saw, screw-driver, pliers, small plane, rule, wood chisel, brace, a bit, and square. Then you're ready. If you need to fix anything—ask Her for a hairpin!

to belligerent ports far away from the European war zone.

The President would be empowered to draw lines on the world map at any time he chose and designate them "combat areas" into which American vessels and travelers could not go.

Belligerent governments would have to pay cash for everything they purchased here, but citizens of belligerent nations could buy commercial goods on credit.

Three Persons Drown

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 28 (AP) — Three persons drowned and a fourth was seriously injured when their automobile failed to make a curve, climbed an embankment and plunged into a mill pond near here about 3 a. m. today.

The dead: Joseph Dzyk, 25, (1785 Prospect avenue) New York city; Michael Ruskak, 25, (312 E. 89th street) New York city; a girl, identified only as "Betty," about 25, who lived in the vicinity of 187th street and St. Nicholas avenue, New York city; Michael Zurenko, 20, also of (215 E. 96th street) New York city, was in serious condition at Vassar Hospital here suffering from submersion and exposure.

Encounters Submarines

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 28 (AP) — The Brazilian liner Santarem, bound for Brazil, reported today she had encountered off the Canary Islands a flotilla of three German submarines, which came to the surface nearby to ascertain her nationality.

Due to conditions related to the European war, there was a sharp advance in average local market prices for farm products during the period from August 15 to September 15. On the former date the average price level of farm commodities stood at 88 per cent of the 1909-1914 base. By September 15, farm prices had jumped to 98.

American Hotel Corp. Managers from New York State met recently at the Gov. Clinton Hotel for a two-day conference. The managers are left to right, front row: Vaughn, New York city; Senator A. H. Wicks, Kingston and R. R. Gross of the Gov. Clinton. Those in the second row in the same order are: Henry Schick, Port Jervis; the Messrs. Gorman and Smith of New York; Huntington, L. I. In the top row are: F. O. March, C. M. Watts, T. A. Dandrew, Troy; T. B. Judge, Syracuse; A. E. Buddenhagen, Buffalo; C. H. McLaughlin, of the New York office.

Pushed a little higher in the curb were E. W. Bliss, Gulf Oil and American Gas & Electric. Lockhead and American Cynamid "B" slanted lower.

Quotations by Morgan Davis & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, 15 Broad street, New York city, branch office, 48 Main street, R. B. Osterhoudt, manager.

Department store sales for the nation as a whole showed an average gain last week of 11 per cent over the same week last year. In the New York area the showing was still better, the gain being 13.7 per cent. Philadelphia was still better with a gain of 25 per cent.

General Motors reported net of $8,627,268, or 15 cents a common share, for the third quarter of the year, was lowest for any quarter since the 1938-1939 period. Earlier change-over and the tool strike in July is given as reason for the showing.

At a meeting of AAR directors in Washington yesterday it was estimated that carloadings for this week probably remained at or near the peak level of last week, as traffic resisted the normal seasonal downturn. Heavier traffic is continuing in the industrial east, there is a heavier movement of commodities in the southwest and there is a larger volume of traffic to Gulf ports, presumably for export.

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins reports that individual incomes in the country for the nine months ended September 30 were more than two billions of dollars ahead of the same period in 1938, the total being $50,789,000,000. Dividend payments in September totaled $805,000,000 against $723,000,000 in September last year.

Reflecting a heavy increase in passenger traffic American Airlines shows earnings for the nine months to September 30 of $964,283, or $3.21 a share compared with earnings in 1938 period of $48,691, or 16 cents a share.

Associated Gas & Electric Co. has filed application with the SEC under the holding company act for approval of a plan of simplification. Would liquidate the company and transfer its assets to Associated Gas & Electric Corp.

Federal Judge Holly yesterday in Chicago held as "fair, equitable and feasible" Atlas Corporation's plan for reorganizing Utilities Power & Light Corp., which ignores the interests of Class A, Class B and common stockholders in the present corporation. Decision sets a precedent on the question as to whether a junior stock issue can be shut completely out of a reorganization under 77B, when the corporation is solvent.

Employment in the steel industry increased nearly 44 per cent in September, with 44,000 workers being added to the pay-rolls.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Oct. 28 (AP) — The stock market retreated warily today after an initial bounce upward.

Volume dwindled following a moderately fast opening and leaders sank behind fractions to around two points.

Brokers said the decline was due more to absence of buying sentiment than to any pressure of offerings. Traders, disappointed that yesterday's late rally wasn't followed up, held off from positions with the week-end in mind. Sales approximated $500,000 shares.

Down most of the time were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Bendix, Glenn Martin, Sperry, International Nickel, Westinghouse Electric, Allied Chemical, Santa Fe, New York Central, Great Northern, Goodyear, U. S. Rubber and Montgomery Ward.

Among the aircrafts Curtiss Wright, which opened with a block of 12,000, touched a high for the year and kept its head above water.

The Amsterdam Bourse was quiet and irregular. Bonds were narrow, with some South American dollar loans pointing upward. Commodities were mixed.

Pushed a little higher in the curb were E. W. Bliss, Gulf Oil and American Gas & Electric. Lockhead and American Cynamid "B" slanted lower.

National Guard To Drill Near New Paltz Soon

Definite dates for the field training of the local National Guard units of the Kingston armory, Headquarters Battery and Combat Train and Battery A, of the 156th Field Artillery, the tentative location of a camp near New Paltz and starting of two drills apiece for each unit next week in accordance with the recent ruling of the War Department in requiring additional training, were listed today by Major Harold A. McLaughlin, of the Poughkeepsie armory.

All field training, to be done week-ends opening a week from today, will be done on a site near New Paltz. The exact location has not been definitely settled.

The maneuvers will be all under regimental battalion supervision.

Starting on November 4 and 5, the second drill will be held near New Paltz two weeks later, November 18 and 19, with another week-end of field work on December 2 and 3.

The War Department in Washington recently ordered this training in addition to the regular 15-day stint which the New York guardsmen did this summer.

The Poughkeepsie and Newburgh units will join Kingston in this field training.

State Troopers and B. C. I. men who are still searching for the hit-and-run driver who struck and fatally injured Mrs. James Carlon, elderly Walker Valley resident, Tuesday night, report no further developments.

Mrs. Carlon, who had her left arm completed severed between the elbow and shoulder and suffered other injuries, when she was struck down by the unknown motorist as she was crossing the road to visit a neighbor, died at the Horton Memorial Hospital, Middletown, Friday. Her condition had been considered critical from the start because of the large quantity of blood she had lost, although she was rushed to the hospital but a few minutes after the accident.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock, with Mass at the Sacred Heart Church, Pine Bush. Burial will be in St. Joseph's cemetery, Middletown.

Mrs. Carlon, a native of Ireland, where she was born in 1873, had conducted a summer boarding house in Walker Valley for some 25 years past. Surviving are her husband; a daughter, Mrs. Joseph McGuire of New York city, and one son, Herbert Carlon of Walker Valley.

Legion 'Caravan' Leaves for Game

Over 450 children today were the guests of Kingston Post, of the American Legion, at the football game at the West Point Military Academy. The trip was made to and from West Point in chartered busses and private automobiles, headed by an escort of State Troopers.

It was shortly before 9 o'clock this morning that the children began to gather at the Legion building on West O'Reilly street, and were assigned to their seats in cars and busses, and then headed by the automobile of Mayor C. J. Heiselman, the motorcade started on the trip to West Point.

In order to facilitate the loading of the children into the busses and cars, a special detail of police were on hand to keep traffic moving.

The rain of this morning failed to cut down the attendance of the children who brought their own lunches, and from the happy expressions on their faces they were looking forward to a most enjoyable outing.
